Welcome!

The International School Choice and Reform Conference (ISCR) is a global academic conference that gathers scholars who study various forms of school choice, systemic reform, and educational innovation. This includes scholarship on how school choice is enacted, the mechanisms that structure school choice programs, and both the direct and systemic effects of school choice and reform programs and initiatives. ISCR invites researchers with multiple perspectives on these issues to attend our annual meeting. Some of the research presented and discussed at this conference might be supportive of various forms of school choice, while other research presented at the conference has a more critical stance. Some participants favor one form of choice while opposing other forms of choice. Conference participants are connected by the goal of using high-quality research to shed light on how school choice and reform policies actually work in practice.

The conference emphasizes:

- Both critical and supportive analyses of all forms of school choice. The ISCR actively seeks to include all sides of the school choice and reform debate.

- Emphasis on high quality, data-backed research or informed policy debate. The Program Committee subjects all proposals to critical peer review.

- Concentration on what we can learn from international experiences and comparisons.

- An opportunity to attend a small conference where meaningful networking can take place in an atmosphere which is both academically rigorous and professionally friendly. All presentation sessions are designed with abundant time for discussion and debate.

From the graduate student to the senior scholar level, the ISCR offers a unique opportunity for school choice researchers to gather in small groups. We accomplish this by keeping enrollment small—conference attendance is limited to about 150 scholars and practitioners—and including in the registration fee multiple meal and reception opportunities for participants to spend time together.

The ISCR has grown into an important forum for the examination of diverse forms of education, including alternatives and reforms to district-run, traditional public schools. Its primary goal is to act as a means whereby scholars and practitioners can come together in small groups to debate and discover unanswered questions about school choice and reform and to identify areas of possible collaboration.

We hope to see you at our next meeting, which will take place in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, Jan 13-16, 2023.

Anna J. Egalite and Angela Dills,
Co-Chairs of the International School Choice and Reform Conference

Description: School choice research has evolved since the 1990 publication of John E. Chubb and Terry M. Moe's pathbreaking Politics, Markets, and America's Schools. What does the future hold? To stimulate thinking, we invite any conference participants to weigh in on these questions:

- What were the key research questions regarding school choice in the U.S. in the 1990s? How were those questions resolved, or do we still grapple with them?
- How would the answers differ if we considered Canada/Europe/Australia? Asia? Africa? Latin America?
- What about the 2000s? 2010s?
- Will the 2020s differ? What key questions should we explore in the 2020s?
- Are there ways to make research easier, as by reforming Institutional Review Boards?
